He Stopped the Procession.

A clergyman, who is also a wit, once preached rather a long sermon from the text:

"Thou art weighed in the balance and art found wanting."

After his congregation had listened for about an hour, some began to get weary and went out; others soon followed, greatly to the annoyance of the minister.

Another person started, whereupon the parson stopped in his sermon, and said: "That's right, gentlemen; as fast as you are weighed pass out."

All the others waited until the sermon was ended.—Spare Moments.

Quaint Epitaph.

An epitaph as curious in its way as any of the quaint gravestone inscriptions that have been recorded is on a tombstone in the cemetery of a suburb of Paris.

The husband died first, and beneath the record of his name was placed, at his request, the line:

"I am anxiously awaiting you. July 30, 1827."

When his widow died, forty years after, the following line completed her inscription:

"Here I am. Sept. 9, 1867."—Elgin Courant.

1999 A.D.

"Mr. Tupper," said the twentieth century business woman to her handsome typewriter. "I am sorry to say that after this week I must get along without you."

The young man burst into tears.

"You cannot mean it," he sobbed.

"Alas, yes. Last night my husband found one of your hairs on my coat."

A Long-Felt Want.

"But what," asked the fair prospective purchaser in the bicycle shop, "what is that tiny little pill box just under the handle bar for?"

"That, miss," replied the suave dealer, "is for the safe keeping of the piece of chewing gum."

Whereupon the deal was immediately consummated.

What Love Is Worth.

ST. LOUIS DE FRANCE.

A DEPARTURE FROM PREVIOUS RELIGIOUS CONSTRUCTION.

One of the Largest and Finest Church Edifices in the Province of Quebec—A Beautiful Model—The Plans and Measurements.

The Province of Quebec is dotted with fine churches, but the new St. Louis de France, in that part of Montreal above Sherbrooke street and east of St. Lawrence street, is one of the finest and largest parochial churches to be found within its confines. In its architecture it differs materially from previous religious construction. The facade of cut stone consists of three arches, which form a peristyle. The central arch is crowned by a bronze statue of the church's patron saint, Louis of France. On the right hand corner, at Avenue de l'Hotel de Ville and Roy street, rises a tower 70 feet in height, in which are inclosed the baptismal fountains. On the other side the main tower, 30 x 30 feet, rises gracefully and majestically to a height of 208 feet. The corner pillars are of cut stone of different shades.

The niche for the bells, in the upper part of the tower, is also of cut stone, of octagonal form, 24 x 24 feet. The cross which crowns the tower is of gilt iron, of wonderful workmanship.

The greatest width of the front is 104 feet and its greatest height is 116 feet. The body of the church is 82 feet in width and 240 feet in length over all.

In the interior decoration of the church the Roman style of architecture has been strictly followed, even in matters of detail. The finishing of the walls and ceiling is in wood of various colors, with carved panels, and graceful ornaments in gold. The arches of the nave are very elegant. The central panel of the ceiling in wood of various colors, with carved panels, and graceful ornaments in gold. The arches of the nave are very elegant. The central panel of the ceiling is adorned with excellent copies in oil of the works of various masters, the subjects reproduced being the Rosary of Santa-Ferrato, surrounded by a chain of Angels imitated from Raphael; the Immaculate Conception of Murillo; the Annunciation, by Guido Reni; the Assumption of Titian; the Crowning of the Holy Virgin of Raphael, while in the sanctuary is a reproduction of St. Louis praying by Le Brun.

The railing of the sanctuary is of carved white oak, with marble top, and the stalls of the sanctuary are of the same wood. The altars, the principal of which is of imposing proportion, are also of wood with marble panels and columns, of the finest colors.

The church is well lighted by twenty-five large windows, of colored glass, the gift of the various societies of the parish and of some of the members of the congregation. The designs on these windows include 'makes of various saints, copied from the works of Le Sueur, Le Baron and Cabanel; while the surrounding panels are imitated from the celebrated windows of the Cathedral of Rheims. This part of the work has been done in Rheims, under the direction of Messrs. Fritel and Vermonet.

The lawn social announced in last issue has been fixed for the evening of Wednesday 14th inst. A first class programme of musical and literary selections has been arranged for, and a good time is promised. All the delicacies of the season will be for sale on the grounds at a merely nominal rate. Come one and all and enjoy the pleasures of the evening. Admission 10 cents. Should the weather prove unfavorable the entertainment will be given in the schoolhouse.

Mr. R. Finigan is on the sick list.

Mr. A. and Miss M. Miller spent Sunday at Deseronto. Miss G. Stover accompanied them home.

Miss Ethel Fleming spent a few days with her sister at Stella.

Miss E. Demorest, teacher at Hawley is spending the holidays with her sister Mrs. C. Collins.

DENBIGH.

The weather has been all that could be desired lately, and grain is growing fast. Most of the meadows however are poor and less than an average crop of hay is expected.

Although everybody is yet complaining of hard times a few local improvements are again being made at our village and vicinity.

The drive shed at the Methodist church has at last been finished.

A frame kitchen has been added to the Lutheran parsonage.

Jas. Johnson has built a stone house to the rear of his store, and a nice veranda in front of it.

Chas. Both has built a new picket fence in front of his house and a piece of sidewalk and is now plastering the inside of his house.

Paul Stein is going to do some repairs to his grist mill, and may put up a new frame barn.

Theodore Thompson is building a new house and E. Berndt has added a kitchen to his house.

E. Wagar is also building a new house, and A. John has built a new stable.

Albert L. Stein got his right hand badly cut while cutting lath in his father's mill and will not be able to use it for some time.

REMARKABLE ESCALADING.

By a Pyramid U. S. Soldiers Send a Man Over a 31-Foot Wall.

A remarkable feat has just been accomplished by United States soldiers stationed at Fort Sheridan, Ill. An improvised parapet thirty-one feet high was scaled by means of a pyramid of soldiers. Eighteen of the heaviest and strongest of the men formed the base of the pyramid. Upon the shoulders of these stood ten men. Up climbed six men and stood on the shoulders of the six, then four on the shoulders of the six, then three on the shoulders of the four. The huge pyramid swayed and rocked unsteadily, but it hung bravely together. Could it have stood perfectly upright the upper man could have reached the top.

THE poor house question will not down. This county's inhumanity to the unfortunate and destitute among us rises up to condemn us. Our county commissioners should consider this question in a broad and generous spirit. The lack of a House of Refuge is a blot upon the name of the good old County of Lennox and Addington. A project is now on foot to found a poor house in Napanee. The County Council should join issue with the town and make it a county institution.

A CANADIAN WOMAN.

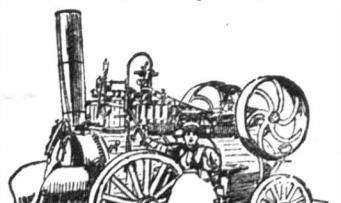

The Only Woman Engineer in the United States of America.

Mrs. Annie Shanahan, of Tulare, Cal., claims to be the only woman engineer in the United States, and is proud of the distinction.

She has been running the engine for the planing mill at Mountain Home, in Tulare County for over a year, and she likes the work, although a great deal of it is of the roughest kind.

Mountain Home is a hamlet that exists more on account of the planing mill than anything else, and the people there are of the rough, sturdy sort.

"We never had no man here that runs that engine like she does," said one of the men. "It never stops a minute dur-

A TRIP DOWN THE ST. LAWRENCE.

To the Editor of THE NAPANEE EXPRESS.
Dear Editor—For the benefit of those who have not had the pleasure of a trip down the St. Lawrence to Montreal I will give you a few lines in reference, as I have just returned from the round trip, per Str. Alexandria. It is said that the scenery is superior to even the Hudson of New York. We started from Picton at two o'clock p.m. on Monday 21st. Among our company were Rev. Mr. Young formerly of Napanee, Rev. Mr. Tucker of Bath, Methodist minister, who is transferred to Bromes County, Quebec, Mr. Cooper, Mr. Sheriff, and Mr. Williams, of Picton. Mr. Young kept us well posted about the points of interest along the route. The officers and crew are a jolly lot of fellows and used us like gentlemen. Our board and state rooms were first class, the only difficulty we had was to understand the French language and unfortunately we were not in it. We had on board about $15,000 worth of cheese and an immense lot of other freight. We arrived at Kingston at 9 o'clock and at daylight we were at Brockville. The sailing here is delightful—here is the termination of the thousand islands. Next is Prescott. Here we saw the International car ferry boat which sank a few days previous. Ogdensburg is opposite and just a little below are the extensive buildings of the state insane asylum. Some of these cost over $100,000. They have 1000 acres of land connected. Their supplies are received from underground railway cars from one central distributing place.

We next enter the first rapids called the Gallops, our next stop is at Morrisburg. Here we met with a misfortune which might have been disastrous. The current at this point is very swift and in trying to land the boat struck the wharf at full speed—6 cheese overboard, 60 doz. eggs smashed, and $50 damage to the wharf was the consequence, besides a good shaking up we all realized.

The next rapids is the Long Sault. These are the most formidable. We go through at the rate of about 30 miles an hour. Cornwall is at the foot of this. We then enter lake St. Charles, 40 miles long, then comes the Coteau, Cedars, and Cascade rapids in succession. This is the most beautiful part of the river. There the Canadian Atlantic crosses the river to Valleyfield where Shortis committed that terrible murder so familiar to everyone. The Ottawa river enters below this into Lachine Canal at the town of Lachine as our boat is too heavily loaded to enter these rapids. The sail along this canal is very beautiful. The land is extra, mostly all gardens along here. We enter Montreal about 9 o'clock, Tuesday night, in time to see the illumination and fire-works. It would be impossible to describe the beauty of the city when illuminated as this display was in honor of our beloved queen. Rev. Mr. Tucker and I took in the city by electric cars.

Many of the principal buildings were outlined by thousands of electric jets and drapery.

Next morning I visited the ocean vessels Ormidale and Carthaginian of the Allen Line, and the Labrador of Liverpool and Straits of Menai of Glasgow.

The Labrador is 420 ft. long, draws 25 ft. 8 in. of water, capacity 5000 tons, 6 decks, but the Man-of-War is the attraction, manned by 460 men. I was shown about her by one of the marines. On the top deck are five one hundred pound cannon, 7 maxim guns, and several twelve pounders. On the lower decks are the hospital, prison, magazine, small arms and many other things. On one day 12,000 visitors had been shown about her. This is the best equipped vessel that has ever visited Montreal, and the

ANDREE'S DEATH SURE.

A Kansas Professor Says All the Expeditions Are Against Him.

Andree's daring in attempting to reach the pole in a balloon is almost certain to cost him his life. This is the opinion of Professor Lewis L. Dyer of the Kansas State University, and there are few men whose opinions on polar expeditions are of greater value.

"I am afraid Andree will never be seen again if he makes a successful start from Spitzbergen for the north pole in his balloon," said a Professor Dyer. "His expedition, as an example of daring, has never been equaled; it is a piece of stupendous courage, but nature in its most terrible aspect is against him, and it is very unlikely he will come back."

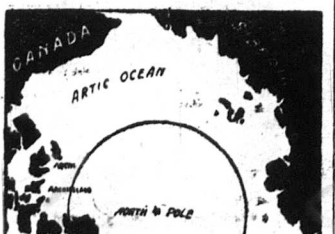

"The theory that the north pole may be crossed in a balloon is extremely fascinating, but the difficulties in the way are almost, if not quite, insurmountable. Nansen's drift in his boat through the polar currents was completely practicable beside it. Ice and land are tangible things to travel over, but who knows of the currents of the air?"

"Andree has already started from Stockholm, Sweden, for the islands of Spitzbergen, half way between Norway and the north pole. The balloon will be filled about June 20, and if the winds are favorable, that is, from the south or southwest, it will be cut loose, and Andree and his party will have started on their perilous, and, I believe, hopeless journey."

"Andree argues that Nansen having failed to reach the north pole by trailing himself to the currents of the ocean, there is more certainty in currents of air. He relies on the prevailing winds from the south or southeast carrying him near or across the pole, and probably waiting the balloon clear across the arctic circle to Alaska or Siberia. For a year circulars from the Russian Government have been distributed over Siberia commanding the people to watch for the balloon and to care for its passengers. Similar circulars have been distributed over Alaska and Greenland."

"A glance at this map will show the difficulties of the expedition. It is said that all winds in that country are from the south, because at the north pole it is south in every direction. Winds coming from every direction will produce cross currents that will blow him everywhere and nowhere. Winds usually follow land inclosed waterways. When I was at Holstenborg, Greenland, I observed the winds for seven weeks. From June 9 to June 20 the winds blew hard from the south and brought fog and rain. In August and September the winds were from the north. Penny told me that in the north of Greenland the winds were from the dome of the continent toward the sea in every direction. Greeley reported from Cape Sabine and beyond high winds from various directions. It is therefore likely that the balloon will be blown across the arctic circle in a criss-cross way, now north, now south, east or west, and in all the variations of the points of the compass. There will probably be times when there will be no winds at all, on account of the low temperature, or the winds, taking him to a point he does not desire, may abandon him, only to take him up again and bear him out of his course. He may steer a few points in the wind, but he cannot prevail against contrary winds.

"The greatest danger he may fear is

The Napanee Express

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, JULY 9th, 1897.

THIS is the season when the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of a straw hat.

THE unity of the Tory leaders is evidenced by the fact that Foster and Bowell do not speak as they pass by.

THE old boys have taken their departure from Ottawa, Sir Mackenzie Bowell has gone home, and the Grit Government is still in power.

THE BEAVER has gone its 11 cent corn one better. It now points out that the Government has voted this session $98,009,487. What next will it spring on an unsuspecting public.

THERE is this to be said in favor of the inane young man who rocks the boat—he is usually the victim of his own folly. "The didn't know it was loaded" variety generally kills somebody else.

THE new Post-master General is deserving of great praise for the saving effected in the administration of his department. There is every prospect that under his management this branch of the public service will soon be self sustaining.

MRS. ANNIE SHANIVAN,

ing the day, and always runs as smooth and steady as one of them eight-day clocks."

It is over three years since Mrs. Shanivan and her husband arrived at Mountain Home. They came from the East, where her husband had charge of the motive power of a big flour mill, and got big pay. But his health broke down, and so they came to Mountain Home, where he took charge of the engine in the planing mill. For a time he improved in health, but finally had to give up, and his wife took charge of his work. There was nothing else to do, as money was scarce and sickness was expensive. And the woman has done the work satisfactorily ever since. She does everything about the engine, from shovelling the fuel under the boiler to making the repairs, and keeps everything in the best of order.

"Do I like my work?" she replied in answer to a question. "Of course I do. If I didn't like it I couldn't do it well, and then I would be discharged." She was standing with one hand resting, almost affectionately, on the throttle valve, and made a pretty picture, for she is a good-looking woman and of evident refinement.

Mrs. Shanivan wears no greasy jumper, nor is her face black and going with soot. Instead she is always attired in neat fitting clothes of pretty colors and her face and hands are kept as clean as they would be if she were engaged in ordinary household duties. The engine room is as neat as any kitchen in the land.

"The clothes problem," she said, "was a difficult one to me at first. Everything gets dirty, and, of course, skirts are likely to catch in some of the gear, as I have found out. Bloomers? No, I wouldn't wear bloomers. It is all right to do a man's work when one has to, but wearing his clothes is another matter."

"The way I solved the problem was to make my skirt and waist of thin wash goods so that I could change them every day. I have plenty of time to do the washing here and can iron them at night. At first I made the skirt long, like those I had always worn, but last summer I caught in the crank right there and I had my hand and knee badly hurt. If the goods had not been thin and torn I would have been killed."

"The planing mill is owned by my husband, and we manufacture fruit trays, orange boxes, shingles and stakes."

"I was born at St. George, Canada, in 1864, and there I was married. I have five children, and my home and family are my chief comforts."

Dead Easy.

"Are you going to the seashore or mountains this summer?"
"Oh, the seashore. It's too exclusive in the mountains, but at the seashore anyone can get in the swim."

An Ontario Lady Had Her Hands Poisoned.

Ladies should remember that the Diamond Dyes are the only pure, true and undiluted dyes in the world. The imitation dyes sold under various names have bulk enough, but three-fourths of the contents is composed of cheap and worthless ingredients most dangerous to use and handle.

Diamond Dyes, prepared according to scientific principles, are always the same in color and strength; these great advantages the women of Canada fully appreciate.

An Ontario lady writing about Diamond Dyes says:

"Your Diamond Dyes are the best I have ever used; they are quite harmless to work with and never irritate the skin. I had occasion to use a package of common, cheap dye that was sold me as being equal to the 'Diamond,' but it proved a source of great trouble. After using it a severe rash appeared on my hands, showing it contained poisonous matter."

largest. It was through many of the most important places, such as Notre Dame cathedral, St. Peters, Y.M.C.A., Dominion Square, Bank of Montreal, Windsor Hotel, which is the largest in Canada, but one of the chief features is Mount Royal, the pride of Montreal. It lies 700 feet above the river and can be reached by cable cars, which I had the pleasure to enjoy. The view from here is not surpassed anywhere. The cemeteries are situated here, and from one of them may be seen Mount Calvary and the crucifixion. I could refer to many other scenes but time and space will not allow.

Divines All Meet on a Common Level and are of One Accord in Proclaiming the Healing Powers of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder—It Relieves in Thirty Minutes.

"When I know anything is worthy of a recommendation I consider it my duty to tell it." Rev. Jas. Murdoch, of Harrisburgh, Pa., says this of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder after having been cured of a very malignant form of catarrh. He is not the only great divine on this continent who could and who has preached little sermonettes on the wonderful cures effected by this famed remedy. What names are more familiar to Canadians than the Rt. Rev. A. Sweetman, Lord Bishop of Toronto, and Dr. Langtry, of the church of England; the Rev. Mungo Fraser, of Knox Presbyterian church, Hamilton, or the noted Methodist preacher-traveller, Dr. W. H. Withrow, of Toronto. All these men have proven what is claimed for Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, and have given their written testimony to it.

nightly last month in a Berlin circus, where Signora Pepina di Mountbello, a young Italian girl, mounted on her dark-brown mare, "La Folie," undertook to jump across an open victoria, with four men seated in the carriage. Signora di Mountbello was born at Trieste, of wealthy parents, and at an early age showed great liking for riding on horseback. Her wishes in that direction being granted she was soon the best horsewoman in town, and finally her passion for the sport caused her to enter upon a professional career in the Circus Vidoli at Trieste. Her daring exhibitions soon made a name for her, and she commands to-day the highest salary paid any high-school equestrienne in Europe. Another of her unique feats is the jumping of high hurdles, and over four full-grown horses standing closely together, side by side. The jump across a carriage driven into the arena with four people seated within, has never before been shown in a circus or riding school.

Urinary troubles caused me much loss of sleep, and I suffered from a tired worn out feeling. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me relief in a short time. The pain in my back has disappeared, and I feel that I would be doing wrong not to recommend them to others suffering as I did. They are the best medicine I ever used."

REGION ANDREE WILL ATTEMPT TO TRAVERSE IN HIS BALLOON.

from the ice fogs, so dreadful and penetrating that no clothing is proof against them. They are caused by the south and north winds meeting over the great ice masses. How will he make observations in these impenetrable fogs? When I was at Cape Sabine I noted strong winds for four or five hours, then no wind and a great deal of bewildering fog.

"If Andree, on the other hand, should cast loose in a fine wind blowing from south-southeast he would probably go over the pole, for with the wind from thirty to sixty miles an hour it would only take three or four days to reach the pole and it will be daylight all the time. With eight or nine days of steady wind he could cross the pole to Siberia. But when he has got to the pole how will he know he has reached it? The mariner takes his bearings by observations of the sun and moon at midday. There is no midday at the pole. The sun circles around the heavens in gradually narrowing circles until, on June 21, the highest northern point is reached. The circles widen then until after the September equinox, when the sun disappears and a night of six months begins. But should he be able to make observations with the sun low, or by a fixed star, the difference of a minute in his measurements would be the difference of a mile on the earth and the pole could probably not be determined within a dozen miles or so. Looking out from his balloon and knowing that he was in its vicinity he could not determine just where he was. If he could land and stay awhile he might make such observations as would be valuable. But while he was away from the balloon contrary winds might seize it and bear it away and leave him to die with his discovery. Even should everything be favorable to leaving the balloon and making trips on sledges, neither he nor his companions would be in physical condition to stand the work. It takes the work of weeks in the cold atmosphere to accustom one to its hardships.

"As I said before, Andree's expedition is most fascinating in its bare possibilities of success, and eclipses that of Nansen in its reckless daring. But I cannot believe it practicable. I believe the pole will be reached some day overland—or rather by ice—but it will be by a steady, well-planned expedition that will go forward prepared to retrace its steps safely. A dash to or over the pole through the air sounds fine, but I do not believe it is practicable, and I am afraid that Andree's attempt will be disastrous, although I sincerely hope he will get through all right and land in Canada."

"The fascination for polar exploration is marvellous. It is a challenge that nature throws down to man. 'Win the pole,' she says, 'and great will be your prize.' She has awarded prizes for these attempts and the nearer the explorer reaches the pole the greater the prize. Nansen's prize has been world-wide fame and an ample fortune. Should Andree succeed in reaching the pole and returning his name will never die and the world will be at his feet."

Dying Man Grasps at a Straw.

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart has done so much for me that I feel I owe it to suffering humanity to give testimony. For years I had smothering spells, pains in my left side, and swelled ankles. What Some Royal Women Are Engaged In—Marriage of Royalties—The Business Woman's Home-Coming—All Is Not Gold That Glitters.

"One of the things that has hurt me more than anything else in going away from home," says the girl who started out in the world to make her own way, "was when I went back after some time and found that I was no longer a necessity there. Every one was as glad to see me as possible and affectionate in every way, but I found that I had gradually drifted out of the family life—I was an outsider. They made their plans and lived their lives without me. They did not need me in any way. My outside life has been pleasant; I have done what I intended to do, and my relations with my family are pleasant in every way, but I shall never forget entirely, I think, that little hurt feeling, that feeling of loneliness, when I first found that I was an outsider."

A Jacobite Wedding.

British Jacobites celebrated the marriage of the Princess Maria Theresa of Bavaria and Prince Ferdinand Pius de Bourbon by a banquet on White Rose Day, June 10. The Princess is, after her elder sister, the direct representative of the Stuart line, and the Prince of Calabria is the son of the former King of Naples, whose portrait was drawn by M. Alphonse Daudet as the King of Italy in his "Roi en Exile." The royal wedding took place on June 8, and, besides the banquet already mentioned, another was given in honor of the occasion on the day of the ceremony by the Order of St. Germain, founded by the Old Pretender.

Prince Ferdinand is a very young man, having been born at Rome on July 25, 1890. He bears the title of Duke of Calabria. Princess Maria Theresa of Bavaria, second daughter of Prince Louis, and granddaughter of the Regent Luitpold, was born in 1872. Prince Ferdinand of Bourbon is a nephew of the late King of the Two Sicilies, the famous "Bomba." His father is the Comte de Caserta, but he bears the title provisionally and without abandoning his claims to the Kingdoms of the Two Sicilies and Jerusalem, one of which his elder brother enjoyed, while the other has long been only a pious aspiration.

This Hot Weather

YOU ARE PHYSICALLY AND MENTALLY EXHAUSTED.

Paine's Celery Compound is the Great Builder and Recuperator.

As a rule there is no pain following physical and mental exhaustion and debility. You know you are weak, faint, languid, have loss of memory, depression of spirits, with a wasting of flesh. Your troubles proceed simply from nervous exhaustion, and though you are not suffering pain and agony, be assured your condition is extremely perilous, and demands immediate attention.

That wonderful stream (the blood) that runs to every part of the body, supplying the most minute nerves and tissues, is foul and poisoned. In your present condition your blood is not a life stream; it is a stagnant pool of disease and death.

The healthy, hale and strong, that bear up during the hottest weather, and that are blessed with clean, pure blood and steady nerves, are the people who make use of Paine's Celery Compound, the only medicine that revitalizes the blood, that fortifies the nervous system, that gives perfect digestive power, sound sleep, and a new lease of life to those advanced in years.

Paine's Celery Compound is truly the great modern elixir of life, and no wonder that doctors approve of it and strongly recommend it.

Why go on in wretchedness and misery when such a medicine promises health, vigor and new life? We recommend you no untried remedy. Every bottle of Paine's Celery Compound is warranted to do the work it promises. There is health and life in every drop.

to deal with eminent people and familiar with the ways and the words of diplomats. The mission which he has accepted is a most honorable one, and one, too, requiring much grace, tact and experience of men. In 1889 Mr. Reid accepted the mission to France and filled its functions with much credit to himself and the country. He might have been minister to Germany, but he saw fit to decline that post on two occasions. His newspaper, The New York Tribune, claims most of his attention, and he preferred the activity that he found in the very current of events as the head of a metropolitan newspaper to the work of a diplomat even of so high and dignified station as that of minister to Germany. The honor of special ambassador from the President of the United States to the Queen of England on the occasion of her jubilee is quite another matter, however, and Mr. Reid felt in all respects gratified with the work and the honor. It is now thirty years since Mr. Reid became connected with The New York Tribune and has been in the public eye almost all of that time. He is 59 years old and thoroughly United States in feeling.

* JOHN E. REDMOND.

The Irish Parliamentarian Who Has Been Suspended from the House.

John E. Redmond, the Irish leader, has won the applause of the nationalists in Canada and the United States by getting himself suspended from Parliament. His fierce protest against the overtaxation of Ireland which caused his suspension by an overwhelming vote is the sole topic in Irish circles. Mr. Redmond is the successor of Mr. Parnell in the British Parliament. He is only 36 years old, but he has sat in the House of Commons fifteen years—or since attaining his majority. He was born in Wexford, and from his childhood was accustomed to hear familiar talk of Parliament, for his father, Captain James Redmond, had long been a member of the Commons. Young John was educated in the Jesuit College near Dublin, and distinguished himself by winning many prizes in scholarship. After the Parnellite split in the Irish party, Mr. Redmond met defeat in his contests for the house, but after he changed the base of his political operations to Waterford he was successful, and has ever since that time been a member of Parliament. Mr. Redmond recently paid a visit to the United States and lectured in many of the large cities on excessive taxation of Ireland for English institutions. It was this very matter and his persistence in disobeying the rules in urging it that caused his suspension from the House of Commons.

Suffered From Headaches. Pain in the Side and Heart Palpitation—She Thinks Similar Sufferers Should Know How She Found a Cure.

From the Frederickton Gleaner.

Miss Alma Millar, of Upper Southampton, N. B., is a daughter of Mr. Ezra Millar, a wealthy and influential farmer, and the young lady is a general favorite among a wide circle of acquaintance, who have had occasion to congratulate her upon her complete restoration to health, after a severe and trying illness. When a correspondent of the Gleaner called upon her, and requested that the facts might be given for publication, the young lady, though not at all anxious for publicity, nevertheless gave her consent in the hope that her experience might prove beneficial to some of the many young girls whose condition of health is very similar to what her's was previous to her cure. Miss Millar stated that when her illness began her mother was unable to look after the affairs of the household and the duties largely devolved upon her. She felt herself growing weak and easily tired, but felt that she must keep up. She says: "Notwithstanding my efforts I found myself growing worse and worse. My appetite failed, my complexion became sallow and my eyes sunken in my head. I was troubled with dizziness, shortness of breath and palpitation of the heart until at times I felt as though I would suffocate. I was almost constantly troubled with a pain in the side, and severe headaches. When I went up stairs I was obliged to rest. Life had become almost a burden and at last I was forced to give up and keep my bed. My friends feared I was going into consumption and one remedy after another was tried with no beneficial results until I was induced to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. In less than three weeks I was able to leave my bed and go about the house, and the use of the Pink Pills a few weeks longer completely restored my health and strength and drove away all symptoms and pains which had made my life so miserable. I feel that in bringing this matter before the public I am but doing simple justice to suffering humanity, and I hope that those afflicted as I was will give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. I might also add that other members of our family have used Pink Pills with equally good results."

What Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for Miss Millar, they will do for thousands of other young girls throughout the country whose condition is similar. They restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks, correct functional derangements, and create a feeling of new life and energy. The genuine Pink Pills are sold only in boxes, the wrapper around which bears the full trade mark, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." Refuse all pink colored imitations and other medicines said to be "just as good."

Triumphs of Domestic Science

One thing that is almost as important as a knowledge of cooking, and fully as important when there are good servants to do the cooking, is a delicate taste. It takes a well-bred taste to know if the viands are cooked to the proper turn, the eggs absolutely fresh, the cream what it should be, and the salad dressing properly mixed. This is a less common possession than people think. A woman who has made a great success as a cook attributes it largely to her knowledge of how things should taste. The woman who takes up domestic science for a profession takes up a business which not only gives her plenty of scope for brain work, but is very hard on her physically. Where she does the practical work, the cooking, she is apt to break down, even while she is studying, if she is not strong. The effect of the heat and standing constantly on the feet is more than most women can stand.

Food and Beauty.

The woman who intends to have a good complexion must make a careful study of the food question. It goes without saying that sugary substances must be banished from the bill of fare. Candies are, of course, excluded. Cakes follow in their wake. As for pies and all other compounds of flour and grease, they are fatal to clear skins. Bread that is doughy or starchy ranks almost as low as pastry in the estimation of the seeker after good looks.

Alcoholic drinks are banished almost entirely; their effect, even in small quantities, being a mild form of congestion of blood in the face, which eventually coarsens the texture as well as ruins the color of the skin. For somewhat similar reasons all sorts of narcotics and stimulants are to be avoided. Whatever excites the nerves or overheats the blood tends toward the final destruction of the smooth, peachy texture which is the chief of every woman's ambition to attain.

Whatever has the effect of producing a healthy action of the digestive organs is good for the complexion. Acid and laxative fruits especially, if taken at breakfast, are good. Graham bread and toast rank high among the bread beautifiers. Red and juicy meats, green vegetables, milk and eggs, are all conducive to the attaining of a brilliant complexion.

The Princess Helene.

Helene, Princess of Naples, has been photographed by one of her new subjects in Italy, and the fresh picture shows her to be a very beautiful young woman. Almost everyone has read of her adventures as the Princess of Montenegro and her remarkable out-of-door life in the Black Mountains. Helene will not soon grow adapted to the cabin environment she will be compelled to live in as the wife of the Crown Prince of Italy. Her girlhood was spent in the mountains, out in the open air, in the saddle, climbing peaks for better views and even in hunting. She is an excellent horsewoman, a rare shot, and the exuberance of her spirits and brilliancy of eye are entirely due to the hygiene of her life up to date. "The Princess does not speak Italian, but she is hard at work learning the language. Her family name is Petrovitch-Njegusch, and her great ancestor, Danilo, was made "Lord of the Black Mountains" in 1696. Hers is a family of fighters.

Wife of the Crown Prince of Italy.

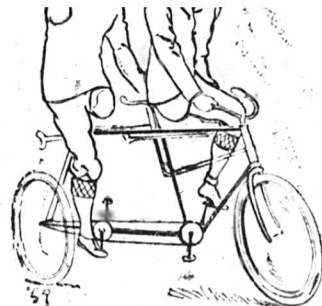

What Would He Do?

There is a young Southern woman in New York, who, when she speaks of her early girlhood in the South, says The New York Times, smiles a little at what is evidently an amusing reminiscence.

"I will tell you what it is," she said to a friend, who asked the cause of her smile. "It was when I was very young that I had a very persistent lover, a man quite a little older than I. Well, finally, after much persistence on his part and persistent snubbing on mine, he asked me to marry him—by letter. It was a warm epistle, and at the close of street as gracefully as you please. The fellow in front had but one hand to steer with, but that was a good right one, and his left leg seemed to bring plenty of power to bear upon the pedal. The other man's right arm and left leg were missing, but the remaining limbs supplied his needs.

Telepathy With a Dog.

W. E. Davis of Boston, possesses a dog that does things which his master thinks are the result of telepathy. He gave an exhibition of the dog recently before the Boston Scientific Society that aroused an immense amount of interest.

Among the score or so of performances by the animal was one that necessitated the exercise of something that approached very closely to human intelligence. Mr. Davis first spread out red, blue, salmon and yellow handkerchiefs in the order prescribed by the spectators. The dog picked them out as suggested by those who witnessed the test at the mental commands of Mr. Davis. The dog apparently paid no attention to the commands of the spectators and Mr. Davis never repeated the order, but simply said: "You heard what the gentleman said. Bring it." The dog brought it in each case.

Similar experiments were made with four numbers on blocks, five silver pieces, and number on a slate. Several times the number was not spoken, but simply written on the slate or indicated with the fingers. Mr. Davis was blindfolded several times during the test, but it did not seem to make any difference, as Dodgefield, the dog, had some way of understanding his master's wishes.

Building an Arch in Turkey.

As Bassora, where they have no timber but the wood of the date tree, which is like a cabbage stalk, they make arches without any frame. The mason with a nail and a bit of string, describes a semicircle on the ground, lays his tebeka fastened together with a gypsum cement, on the lines thus traced, and, having thus formed his arch except the crown brick, it is carefully raised and in two parts placed upon the walls. They proceed thus till the whole arch is finished. This part is only half a brick thick, but it serves them to turn a stronger arch over it.

The Wilting Dandelion.

"Don't you think dandelions are lovely?" exclaimed the art student, dashing into the club with a big bunch of yellow blossoms. The rising musician sniffed.

"No! I don't," she returned shortly, and the other girls insisted on hearing the story behind her emphatic negative.

"Well, I'll tell you," said the music girl. "Those 'perfectly lovely' yellow flowers gave me the worst humiliation I ever had in my life, only last week. Listen to what happened to me, and if any girl here dares to smile I'll never speak to her again."

"You knew that my new hat was spoiled in that rainstorm last week, didn't you? Well, papa wouldn't give me money for a new one, and I'd spent all my allowance, so when Charlie Bloomfield insisted on taking me to the theatre I was in a perfect stew for a hat. Well, who should come along but Alice Ailing. She just laughed at my trouble; I never saw such a girl for expedients. 'Take the ribbon of your new hat and make a little opera bonnet of it,' she suggested, and so I did. But it seemed to want a knot of flowers in front, and I hadn't a penny. I was ready to cry when something occurred to me. I thought it an inspiration then; now, I firmly believe it was a communication from satan. It was to use natural flowers, and those flowers dandelions. You see, they stared right up at me from the lawn, and my ribbon had yellow stripes in it, anyway. So just before I started out I pinned them on, and they looked lovely. But, oh, girls, when I got down town, they had wilted, and I never knew it until I went to powder my nose between the acts. There they were, looking a perfect sight, and every woman near just dying with laughter."

It was too much for the girls who told the story, and in spite of the threat that the musician would never speak to them again if they even smiled they all laughed immoderately.

RINGS OF SATURN.

ONE OF THE BEST OBJECTS OF TELESCOPIC STUDY.

A Unique Member of the Solar System—An Enquiry Into the Question: "What Are These Rings?"—The Theories Advanced by Various Scientists.

The most beautiful telescopic object for the occasional star gazer, with the single exception of the moon, unquestionably is the planet Saturn. The view of the planet given here is from a sketch made a few evenings since, and will give those who have not access to a telescope a fairly good idea of how this ringed world looks at the present time. It will be observed that the picture shows the under side of the rings. This means that we now see their northern face, the planet being shown inverted by the telescope.

These wondrous rings, which render Saturn a unique member of the solar system, have from the time of their first discovery by Galileo—or rather by Huyghens, for Galileo merely saw that there was something protruding from each side of the planet, which he likened to the handles of a jug, without recognizing the true cause of the appearance—been the subject of a deal of speculation among astronomers. In fact, there is little else of interest to be seen about the planet. It is too far away—about 800,000,000 miles when at its nearest—for even in the most powerful telescope to make much of its surface markings. It appears simply to be surrounded by a series of faint, dark bands, which perpetually maintain the same general appearance, and are probably due to cloud strata in its atmosphere. But the rings, the characteristic feature, can be seen through even a small telescope, though through such an instrument they appear as a single object. Indeed, the innermost of the three, known as the "crisp" ring, is so faint as to have escaped notice down to the year 1850, when it was discovered independently by the Bonds, at Cambridge, and by the Rev. Mr. Dawes, in England. They lie in a plane with the planet's equator, and since this is inclined to the plane of the orbit, just as is the earth's equator, the rings are therefore filled with respect to us in such a way that their aspect varies with the change of the planet's position in its orbit. Sometimes we see their under, or southern side; sometimes their upper, or northern side; as now, while at intervals of fifteen years—one half of the period of the planet's revolution in its orbit—they are presented to us edge-wise, as was the case in 1892, and then they become invisible, save through a large telescope.

What are these rings? They have the appearance of being solid, and they were regarded as solid by Laplace, who accounted for their stability by assuming that they were heavier on one side than on the other, so that they swung practically as a single satellite; but it has now been demonstrated, both mathematically, by Professor Clerk Maxwell, and spectroscopically, by Professor Keeler, of the Allegheny Observatory, that they are made up of countless millions of minute bodies—"meteorites"—each of which circles independently of the rest, as a tiny satellite. They are simply ring-shaped clouds of "cosmic dust." The proof of this fact by the spectroscopic is, indeed, one of the neatest performances of this wonderful little instrument. It depends upon the ability of the instrument to detect motion "in line of sight," that is, toward us or from us. As the triple ring circles round the planet one edge approaches us, while the other edge is receding. Were the ring solid the outer margin should move faster than the inner margin, just as a point on the rim of a wheel moves faster than a point near the hub. But the spectroscopic, in the hands of Professor Keeler, and more recently of Professor Keeler, of Pulaski, has shown that it is the inner margin which moves the faster, and this is precisely what ought to happen on the meteoritic theory, since a satellite moves faster the nearer it is to the body around which it circles. The difference in the rates of movement is about three miles

A TOAST.

Here's to the man who loses—
If his loss be another's gain;
For bad luck sharpens ambition,
And success, after striving, heals pain.

Here's to the balm that's a blessing,
To the lover whose love has grown cool,
To the maid who regrets her decision,
To the other man—he was a fool.

Here's to the whirl of life's wheel,
Which spun out the fates of all three,
To the fool who won, the lover who lost—
To him, and to you, and to me.
—Gypsie, in Life.

MAKING OF A MAN.

By GWENDOLINE OVERTON.

If a stupid woman is unoccupied, nothing serious will come of it. But a clever woman should be given something to do. Another good rule is that if a woman is not ignorant of life, she had better have learned it from life and not from books.

Olive Torrey was clever and had nothing to do. She lived at a frontier post, and could go in neither for charity nor clubs nor fads. She had a husband who studied, and no children, so there was nothing for her in her home. She had come straight from a southern California town—and there is less of life to be seen there in a given period of years than in any other spot on earth. But she read—largely Balzac and Thackeray and Crawford and Bourget; which taught her a great deal that she had no need to know. She dreamed dreams of love at first, while she was a bride; but they were not very realistic dreams. She had to idealize her husband vigorously to make them endure even a year, and no one can idealize a husband successfully. He is too much on hand; more especially in a four-company post.

She was a good woman—therefore, when she failed on the husband it did not even occur to her to try on some one else, though there were two promising bachelors. Instead, she went at the novels of manners again, and with new novels, and dwelt on the parts that dealt with intrigue and ambition and success in the world, and skimmed over the love parts. She did not believe in them much now. So her mind became filled with this sort of thing, and there was no vent for it. She wanted to be a brilliant, disillusioned young matron, courted by diplomats, a power in salons—whom ambitions were just a bit difficult of realization where she was.

Even baby understands that it is not right that mother should be always sickly, nervous, fretful and cross. Baby wonders what is the matter. Baby would willingly help if he could. It lies with the woman herself to help herself. No one else can do it. She can help herself if she will. If a woman will take proper care of her womanly self, if she will use the right remedy for weakness and disease of the organs that bear the burdens of maternity, she will soon be healthy, vigorous and amiable. She will be able to help baby, instead of leaving baby to try and help her.

A wonderful remedy for weakness and disease of the organs that make wifehood and motherhood possible is found in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It acts directly on these organs. It makes them strong and healthy. It has transformed thousands of suffering, pain-racked women into healthy, happy wives and mothers. It allays inflammation, soothes pain, and steadies and invigorates the nerves. It prepares for wifehood and motherhood. It insures inherently healthy children. All good druggists sell it. There is nothing "just the same" or "just as good." The druggist who tells you there is, is either mistaken or dishonest.

Mrs. Joseph Simmons, of Hazelgreen, Grant County, Wis., writes: "I enclosed find postage stamps for which please send me the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser. I have used your Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets' and have received a great deal of benefit from them."

When a story writer puts in a doctor he is always said to "look wise." Over one million people have looked wise and acted wisely. They have bought Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. Of these wise folks, 680,000 of them paid $1.50 a copy for the book. It was cheap at that. It is a book of 1008 pages, with 300 illustrations. Think of that! A medical book too. Every body knows how expensive a medical education is. Now there is a great edition of this book, that is being given away. You pay the cost of customs and mailing, that's all. You send at one-cent stamps for the book in strong manilla covers. If you desire a fine embossed cloth cover, send 50 one-cent stamps. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

had to be said over with his tongue, but both of them laid that down to Mrs. Torrey's stupidity. After all, Gordon was improved. It took 18 months to get him into shape, and then he said he was in love with Mrs. Torrey. The way she had brought him up made him hard to

"By the way," the beast exclaimed, as by a sudden inspiration, "why couldn't we double up and save cab hire?"

This fable teaches that even in the animal kingdom there is a strong inclination to retrench operating expenses.

"I would raise a rhapsody," he exclaimed, with all the fervor of a poetic nature, "to thy lips!"

The rich, warm color suffused her countenance.

"Strawberry sods, if you please," she faltered, looking shyly down.

Noblesse Oblige.

The African monarch remained obdurate.

"In three days," he repeated, "you will be in the soup."

The wretched captive groaned. Suddenly a happy thought occurred to him. "Sire," he cried with dignity, "I claim the treatment which is due my rank."

"Indeed!" said His Duskiness, in a more gracious tone. "And what may your rank be?"

"In my country," returned the captive haughtily, "I am a prince—the first in the land."

"Ten thousand pardons, Your Highness," exclaimed the eunuch king, bowing low. "Pray forgive our discourtesy. You must indeed have thought us barbarians. But fortunately, it is not too late to make amends. Bring hither my Minister of the Interior."

"Trilby," he remarked, as the Minister waddled throneward, "we have narrowly escaped a serious breach of courtly etiquette. This gentleman is of royal blood. Therefore he must take precedence over all others. You will accordingly place the missionary in the ice box and serve His Highness for dinner to-night. We may be far from the world of civilization, but at least we are not lacking in the respect which is due to rank."

and interior department reports, and thought great thoughts about Indians, and would have made himself a nuisance to the people at Washington, if they had not become used to that sort of thing and thick-skinned long ago. He was an unpleasant kind of man, and a soldier in appearance, nor by instinct, nor in action. He was to the service what the man who signs his letters "A Citizen" is to a local newspaper. He was always making petty objections to and complaints against what is. And what is should be bowed down to and silently worshipped by a good officer. In short, he was not at all the sort of a man for his wife, and she did not need to be as clever as she naturally was to find this out.

At four-and-twenty she thought she was old and experienced, and quite capable of handling any sort of sharp-edged tools. Although she never posed as unhappy, or thought herself particularly so, the idea came to her that she would like to have the making of a man, to be the Egeria to some Numa. Just what she would make him she had not determined. She would have to have the man first. She got him. He came straight out from West Point, and he was hopeless—impossible.

"Joe, don't you think young Gordon is promising?" she asked her husband. Gordon had come the day before.

"Promising to be about like all the others." There was infinite contempt in that "all the others"—men with no ideas.

"I don't know. It seems to me he has a clever face, the face of a man, that is a man of the world, in embryo."

She was trying to see him in the light of her own imaginings. It is quite human and very feminine to persist in trying to idealize those about one, and only a great many dismal failures succeed in curing one of the habit.

"It struck me that he had the face of a boy from West Point."

His wife's good nature was unflagging. "Now—yes. But he could be made something of."

"A major, if he lives."

Mrs. Torrey was silenced, but not daunted.

Mrs. Torrey continued to think that Thorne Gordon was good material to work with. She liked his name. It smacked of the statesman. She called his face impassable, when it was just weak. She saw secrecy in his eyes—which was shifting. She discovered evasion in his speech—which was trivial. Physically, he did fairly well. He was tall and slender in a distinguished sort of way. There was no cause for the distinction; it was neither in himself nor inherited. If there had been any girls at the post, he would have fallen in love and married, and then Mrs. Torrey couldn't have done anything with him. As it was, he came to her naturally. Nobody else wanted him. She set to work by giving him her books to read. He knew enough. West Point, French to glean all the harm there was in Blazac and Benget. When Mrs. Torrey talked like as therein portrayed, he talked love and she showed it forth.

"It seems to me that the greatest delight in living that a man could have would be to wind other men around his finger."

"It seems to me that it would be to wind women around his finger," her ward would say.

"Only as a means to an end," she suggested.

"That goes without saying," he answered, with the wrong sort of a look. The books had taught him that. Mrs. Torrey recoiled. She didn't mind kneading dough into shape, but she was afraid of pitch. However, she reassured herself and tried it again the next day.

"It is a pity for a promising young fellow to be thrown like an empty beer bottle from an official ambulance away out here on the prairie." The smile struck her as being good, but he found it unflattering. She continued mixing up her comparisons: "You ought to be on the theatre of the world, watching the play of men's passions and minds."

"Why not in the orchestra row, watching the dances?"

"That was clever enough to be preserved as a sample of repartee," she told him; for she insisted upon seeing him through very rosy spectacles, and when she found the rosinness fading or wearing away in spots, she laboriously tinted them up again. She talked diplomacy, the world, life, ambition, to him constantly. She lost sight of the fact that an officer has very little use for that sort of thing. She brought him to correct tastes in the matters of art, and literature, and music, and, above all, personal appearance.

He absorbed how to cut his finger nails, probably, for she never actually told him, and he stopped chipping them on the bias. He tried at saying things with his eyes; pretty generally the things in books and salons and French, but are bad, in fact, in the army and in England. It began with the eye talk, and Mrs. Torrey understood that. But she pretended she did not; so he put it in words. He was very fiery about it—as in the books. They were on the porch together after dark. This was rare, for she was careful of appearances, usually.

"Do you know that you have become life itself to me?" he asked.

"I have tried to show you life."

"Don't talk to me in that cold, instructive way, as though you were years older than I—and honestly. You are only half a year older, and what is that?"

wherein the Balzac showed—and you are beautiful."

"Oh, no. I am not."

"At least you have the face of a Madonna."

"To you it should be the face of a brother officer's wife."

"Can't you see that I love you passionately?"

"I can see that you think you love me romantically, but you don't."

He did, however. He was in earnest, and he had had the decency to keep it to himself for a long while. Then it had burst out, and after that he made her life a burden. She saw that it was her fault, she ought to have seen that the kindest thing to do in the long run would be to drop him relentlessly then and there. Instead of that she tried to reason with him, and to comfort him, which, of course, did not work. He said that if she shook him altogether, he would kill himself, and he might have done so, because his brain was a romantic muddle. Mrs. Torrey was in a very bad predicament when Uncle Sam came to her aid. He ordered Lieut. Torrey to Baltimore to recruit.

Torrey lived in Washington, and went over to Baltimore to the office every day. In two months Gordon had a sick leave and was in Washington. Mrs. Torrey was frightened. She flew into a rage, and told Gordon what she thought of his actions. He retorted by calling her heartless. It ended in a parting with tears and curses; and Gordon married an heiress before he went back.

Mrs. Torrey felt sorry for him. She knew she had broken his heart, wrecked his life. She would do what she could for him. At least she would further his ambitions. He should owe his worldly success to her. She had learned a good deal by real experience now, and she was young, brilliant, very pretty and marvelously attractive. She became quite a feature in Washington society, a woman of the world who never lost her head whatever she might make others do. All this in less than two years. She knew there was no use in trying to advance her husband, and she did not particularly care to, because she had found out now that she was unhappy, horribly unhappy, and that her life was a flat thing. She cared for the Gordon she had made more than she guessed. The real interest of her life lay in him. Her influence was great because of her social powers and her beauty and attractiveness and by dint of trying in those thousands of untold ways that there are of doing such things she got Gordon an attachment at the court of St. James. He had a rich wife and he could accept it.

It was improbable that he did not know whom to thank, but, however that might have been, he gave no sign and neither did she, except to turn horribly pale when she met him on Connecticut avenue one afternoon. She smiled waveringly and pitifully, and he only looked deep into her soul with hurt eyes. He had mastered that much of eye-language. He was rather pleased at the obvious success of it, but she believed his heart was broken, and was as miserable as a naturally good and honest woman is when such a thing is on her conscience.

A year later she was in another frontier garrison, and her husband came in with the mail.

"I say, Olive—you remember Gordon? Well, he's recalled from England."

"Why?"

"It's all in this letter that came to Harcourt. Do you want to read it? He followed the example of the classic parrot, it seems, and talked too blamed much. As a diplomat he's not a success."

And in six short weeks he brought her further news.

"I say, Olive, what do you think young Gordon's been and gone and done now?"

"What?" she asked, desperately.

"Got himself into a scrape in Washington, and has had to resign. Here's some of it in the paper; the rest's in the letter from Walker. He lost his head. He'd better have stayed with his regiment and done his duty, and left foreign courts for men that were born for them."

"Perhaps you are right," she answered.—San Francisco Argonaut.

GREAT STEEL TOWER.

CAPITALISTS PROPOSE TO ERECT
ONE ON MOUNT ROYAL.

It Is to Surpass Anything of the Kind in the World in Many Respects—Dimensions of This Canadian View-Point of a Continent.

Canadian and American capitalists are joining hands and funds in an endeavor to erect on Mount Royal, Montreal, a steel tower, which will in many respects surpass anything of the kind on the continent, or even in the world. An application has already been made to the Montreal City Council by Mr. Francois
Lapointe, architect of Chicago, as follows:

"Canadian and American capitalists
are willing to aid in organizing a company with a capital of $400,000, the amount necessary to construct in Mount Royal Park a steel tower six hundred feet in height and two hundred and fifty-eight feet at its base. For this enterprise ground 350 feet by 350 feet is necessary. The tower will be built according to my plans, which accompany

LULU HURST'S FEATS.

SHE EXPOSES THE SECRET OF HER
MAGNETIC POWER.

They Were Done in Consonance With
the Simple Mechanical Principle Known as 'Deflection of Force'—Scientists Fooled by This Girl.

Lulu Hurst, who hurled umbrellas and men and women and tables over nearly all the stages on this continent, who tearfully put out Charles Frohman's eye and caused Mrs. Langtry to turn a violent somersault in public and nearly dash her brains out, has had a fit of conscience and told all she knows about herself. That it is genuine conscience and no hoax this time is proved by the fact that the lady threw away prospective mints of money to study up her own phenomena, and that she now presents herself in the unenviable light of fooler of the great public. For, with the exception of a few half-hearted assurances that she really did think herself possessed of a "great power," the lady frankly admits that her so-called manifestations were partly pranks and most unconscious physics, and makes the statement, humiliating to large aggregations of the befuddled, that it was their own hysteria and superstition that caused the antics of the victims and the inanimate objects they were trying to hold. If there is money in the book the conscience scheme may not go altogether
unchallengeable.

Never having seen Miss Hurst and not being able to disprove the "undiscovered or unrecognized principle of leverage applied in the deflection of forces" (which is the simple proposition the lady now advances as her sole basis
of operations), and not having yet found,
as she avers, that any one person can electrify six strong men and a chair so that they hang themselves about in their vain efforts to curb the capering object, one is not in a position to controvert Miss Hurst's confessions and scientific statements. That her first remarkable developments were the result of accident can quite be believed, but subsequent events cast blacker shadows behind than can be dissipated by a mere "explanation." Thrusting a hairpin through a feather pillow and finding the noise it made startling, the embryo performer continued the sound, varying it by scrunchings of her feet against the footboard of the bed.
The family being fully roused and excited by these occult symptoms, Lulu

not allowed to touch the floor. A third man mounted the shoulders of the second. An aggregate weight of 600 pounds thus presented itself for a young and unmuscular girl to lift. The young and unmuscular girl, knowing no science, then "placed her open palms against the posts of the chair—and behind them on each side, at a point named C—and made the lift without grasping the chair in the least. The first man and the chair constitute, the now learned lady explains, a compound lever, with two ful-crums, one at A B, where the man's feet are, the other at G, H, where the back legs of the chair stand, tilted. "I place my palms against the chair post
at C, and instead of lifting the chair
the least bit, I press the posts forward
and let the entire chair, with its weight, comes up, leaving nothing touching the floor, but the man's feet. This little movement of pushing the posts forward at C, shifted all the weight from the fulcrum at G H (places of the rear legs)
and threw it forward upon the fulcrum
at A B, the real point of the lever."

The other men may then add their weights to that of the first, and their weight will be distributed at the two fulcrums as the first man's was, but most of it will be thrown at A B (first man's foothold), and lessens the weight
at G H (chair legs' position), thus helping the lifter, instead of adding to her task. She simply manipulates the compound lever composed of the chair back, rear posts and the man's legs, "while the man in the chair does most of the lifting." The principle of resultant test comes into play, for when I push forward one lever at C he is pushing backward at A B, and these two forces coming together create a resultant force, operating in a perpendicular direction
and carrying the chair and its weight upward."

The thing is easily proved or disprov-
ed. Miss Hurst had a perfect and legiti-mate right to exhibit a simple and unconscionable gift, to make money by it,
to decline to explain it, especially as it is a matter of fact that she did not pretend to any of the names of medium, occultist, phenomenon thrust upon her.
The question may arise as to whether it was "quite kind" to knock people about as roughly as the influence she exerted seemed to do; but there is no question
at all as to her right to enjoy the follies
of the superstitious and the gullible.

The editor of The Medical Record
discovered that all Miss Hurst's exhibitions of her force were made in opposing voluntary muscular effort in others. "It is the experimenters, not the subject,
who knock themselves, the chairs, canes,
umbrellas, etc., about." And Miss Hurst goes on to say that once she herself was "mystified beyond expression, by standing to one side without touching the chair, after the struggle began, and seeing six, excited, struggling men, tear a chair to pieces without ever forcing it to the floor." From this she adds a corollary, thus: "The excited state of the subjects themselves, their superstition and their imagination taking such complete possession of them produces a state of partial self-hypnotism."

How the sane and sensible men whose names appeared in connection with Miss Hurst's performances will like this it is not hard to guess. They will probably deny its truth, to begin with. It is, at any rate, one of the most significant of Miss Hurst's statements.

It is open to every person to try the deflection of force with an open palm against the whole muscular force of half a dozen heavy men. As after Miss Hurst's unveiling of the mystery, however, the superstition and imagination
will have nothing to feed upon, the experiment will probably always be unsuccessful. And the truth will never be known. The first part of the book relates an unbroken series of successful experiments. Tales of a huge athlete
"prancing around like a Shetland pony,"
in his wild effort to hold a billiard ball
two or three men grasping it, and "seeing it snap in their fingers like a reel," a major "dancing a war dance" on the stage, and another one going to his knees, the two becoming entangled in their girations on the stage; "big men tossed about like jackstraws," people shrieking, scrambling, clawing—all these,
and a hundred more incidents are related.
It reads like an Arabian Nights' entertainment. And so it is. For most people like to be deluded, and aid and abet
the deluder by making themselves as pliant as possible, and doing half the tricks themselves.—Mary Abbott, in Chicago Times-Herald.

OBJECTS OF WORSHIP.

It Is in This Way That Savages Usually Regard Meteorites.

Savages, whenever they come across meteorites of large size, are apt to regard them as objects of worship. Such, however, was not the dignified fate of a very remarkable specimen that is now in the United States National Museum.

Good Blood

Is essential to Health. Every nook and corner of the system is reached by the blood, and on its quality the condition of every organ depends. Good blood means strong nerves, good digestion, robust health. Impure blood means scrofula, dyspepsia, rheumatism, catarrh or other diseases. The surest way to have good blood is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine purifies, vitalizes, and enriches the blood, and sends the elements of health and strength to every nerve, organ and tissue. It creates a good appetite, gives refreshing sleep and cures that tired feeling. Remember.

Cassidy's Cabot Group.

John Cassidy's beautiful group in marble of John Cabot and his son, now causing much favorable criticism in the London New Gallery, is exhibited in most timely fashion, because of the quad-ricentennial celebrations in honor of Cabot in preparation at Bristol, in Newfoundland and in Canada. Mr. Cassidy's group is noble, animated, full of courage and purpose, and compares well with the best of English sculpture. Mr.
Cassidy is Irish. He was born within sight of the famous Tara's Hall, and his family had been farmers for many generations. When Mr. Cassidy was 17 he went to Manchester and entered the art school there. He studied from the antique and progressed most rapidly.

He won four national medals, an Owen Jones medal, the Plasterers' Company's prize twice in succession, and several Queen's and other prizes. His figure,
"The Digger," was purchased by the corporation of Manchester for its collection. His bust of the late Sir Charles Hallé, now in the Academy, is the best sculptured portrait of the veteran musician. Mr. Cassidy is now at work upon a full-length statue of the Queen. The figure alone is to be eight feet high, and Mr. Cassidy is chiseling it out of Portland stone. The monument is to be erected in and by the city of Belfast.
Mr. Cassidy is only 30 years old.

The Modern Child.

"I sometimes feel," said the old gentleman, "like taking that fearful grandson of mine and slamming him
against the wall."
"What has he done?" asked the man who was penned in the corner.
"I told him that beautiful 'sleeping beauty' story—about how, as soon as the Princess was kissed, all the clocks began to go and the servants began to work and all that kind of thing, and then he said: 'Did some one press an electric button?'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

PROPOSED STEEL TOWER, 600 FEET HIGH, FOR MOUNT ROYAL.

this request, and which it is hoped will meet the approval of the City Inspector. I pray the council to grant me the necessary location, embodying the following attractions: For electric displays, an observatory, mercantile booths, plays, an observatory, mercantile booths, restaurants, operating air-ships, restaurants, theatres, and all things pertaining to and connected with the operation of such a tower; all according to the restrictions and general rules of the city of Montreal. To do this the said ground must be granted for a period of 30 years from the completion of the tower, without any indemnity from the company to the city of Montreal. The city will receive large returns from the noted attraction. After the expiration of 30 years the tower will be the property of the city of Montreal. Work on the tower will begin within six months following the granting of the franchise.

The tower, with the height of the mountain added, 1000 feet above the river almost at its base, will bring the total height above the city up to about 1600 feet. If carried into effect, therefore, the Canadian flag will float higher above Montreal than any flag floats above any other city on the globe. At the top of the tower there will be an observatory 25 feet in diameter, and on the first floor, to be reached by 20 elevators, will be the theatres, with a seating capacity of six thousand. On the second floor there will be booths and a museum. There will be a total accommodation on the several floors and landings for twenty thousand persons.

The total cost of the proposed structure is placed by the promoters at $400,000. Mr. Lapointe, the architect of the design, is a native Montrealeur, who has lived for some years in Chicago.

Leavings.

Farmer Hoen—Th' cashier of our strange robbed us.
Farmer Mowin—An' left th' county, I suppose?
Farmer Hoen—That seems ter be about all he did leave.

You think of Scott's Emulsion as only for those who have consumption or who have inherited a tendency to it. Almost its greatest use is for those whose condition is so impaired as not to be able to get the good they should out of their ordinary food. In nearly every case with these, Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil brings back appetite, stimulates digestion, restores color and plumpness, and controls the diseases of thinness. Book about it, free, excited by these occult symptoms, Lulu used to amuse herself and paralyze them by hurling hickory nuts out a room with closed windows, to fling clothing about on picture frames and otherwise manifest great "spiritual" powers. It is a sad homily on our frail nature that it took only a few of these singularly transparent dodges to fix Miss Lulu's fame as a strange wielder of a supernatural power, and soon she was tipping tables and making chairs dance, telling the past and the future with great success. All these games she owns now to have been the mere fruits of the gullibility and eagerness to be duped which seems to spring anew, with the faintest encouragement, in the mortal breast.

But the "power"—that great unseen, hypnotic, psychic, electric, odic and variously christened force, was to come. At the age of 14 Lulu Hurst held large audiences spellbound, startled, crazed, full to bursting with admiration and awe—first in the country, then in large cities. The newspapers of Chicago, New York, Boston and all the great metropolitan dailies were full of her marvelous exhibitions, and none ventured on scientific explanations of so paralyzing a phenomenon. Chairs and umbrellas continued to be hurled through the air as the power pervaded the lady, and everything floundering and spinning before it. Her "explanation" is that there was absolutely no "power" in her; that, actually ignorant herself of the simple force she employed, she yet knew how to adjust it at will to every case and seldom or never failed in a test.

As Miss Hurst studied more and more deeply into the thing her "wonder increased that some of the learned physicians had not discovered the simple principle of deflection of force" while experimenting with her. "I demonstrated it all the time without knowing it, and they did not detect it," she writes. "It was necessary for the force opposing me to exert itself by and through inanimate objects held in certain specified positions." And "I had no power over inanimate objects unless in connection with opposing muscular force of another person. The amount of force opposed to me did not make much difference, except to increase the wonder of the performance."

With a few simple axioms of this nature the flat of a small and rather weak palm and a quite-terrible-to-be-contemplated-knowledge of the credulousness of human nature, Miss Lulu Hurst played on her unsuspecting public for two years. She stoutly avers that she thought this was a remarkable "power" of hers, and that it was peculiar to herself; but from the accounts of her various tests and experiments the melancholy fact appears that most of the exhibition was obtained from the struggling, squirming, deluded victims, and that Miss Hurst herself was untired and laughing in her sleeve at the pranks she provoked.

Pictures accompany the text of Miss Hurst's book. They represent men writhing in muscular agony, their knees quivering with force, their arms swollen with muscular energy, their feet planted firmly, trying to move a billiard cue or a chair, while a lithe and slender girl stands smiling and unwrung opposing all their contortions by a simple open palm. She reduces her own system to formula, and the pictures are marked with letters showing the leverage points. "The heavy weight lifting test," that feat which fairly staggered multitudes and which consisted of lifting six or seven hundred pounds' weight of men off the floor in a chair by placing the palms of her hands against the chair back, Miss Hurst explains in an interesting and able manner.

When the feat was tested by scientists in Professor Bell's laboratory at Washington, Miss Hurst was weighed and then the pea was put up to 200 pounds. "I then stood on the scales," she goes on, "and lifted a chair containing a man weighing 200 pounds, without increasing my weight the twenty-pound margin given." The question was, since nearly 200 pounds of weight was apparently annihilated and not even the twenty-pound margin given her to lift appeared on the scale figures, what became of the weight when she lifted it? No one ever gave the answer, but the lady now announces herself as prepared to do so—and does it.

A man sits in a chair and places his feet firmly on the floor at two points marked A and B in the illustration. He grasps the sides of the chair at two points marked each D, and tilts the chair so as to throw all his weight on the rear legs at points marked G and H. As everybody thought the "power" was electric or magnetic, it was thought necessary for the man in the chair to keep his feet firmly on A and B, so as to produce and sustain the "electric current."

The second man sat on the lap of the first man and this newcomer's feet were very remarkable specimen that is now in the United States National Museum, says The Washington Post. This strange aerolite is four feet in diameter, weighing 1400 pounds approximately, and has the shape of a ring. It was found in the Santa Catarina Mountains, and for a long time was used as an anvil by Mexicans at Tucson. In this employment it was discovered by Dr. Irwin, of the United States Army, who bought it for a small sum, and gave it to the Smithsonian Institution. Doubtless the substance of this meteorite originally was largely stony, but the stony parts became disintegrated and disappeared after it fell, leaving the ring of iron. Of 400 meteorites that have been seen actually to fall, only about a dozen were metallic, the rest being mainly of stony material, though containing more or less iron.

On the other hand, nearly all of the meteorites picked up in a casual way are masses of metal. It is probably the case that a great majority of such bodies are stony, but meteorites of that description do not attract notice when lying on the ground, being mistaken for ordinary stones. All of these facts are extremely interesting in view of the belief now entertained by science that the composition of meteorites throws light upon the make-up of the terrestrial globe. In fact, according to this theory, the make-up of the earth is much like that of the average meteorite. Obviously, the moment this assumption is made, the study of the structure of meteorites comes to have extraordinary importance for man's knowledge of the planet on which he lives is restricted almost entirely to the surface of it. The bowels of the earth remain almost unknown.

Meeting the Occasion.

It was the practice of a certain London editor, some years ago, to write his leading article or articles at home the night before publication. The rest of the week he did nothing. One night his articles had not come to hand at the office. Ten o'clock—11—12—and still no sign of an article. There was commotion at the office, and at last a messenger was sent to the editor's house. He found him with a glass of brandy and water before him, and newspapers scattered about. "What do you want?" asked the editor. "The article for to-morrow." "Didn't I send it?" "No; at least it has not come to the office." "Give me The Times." The Times was found and handed to him, and with unsteady fingers he cut out one of the leading articles. This he stuck upon a sheet of paper, and then, taking his pen, wrote at the top: "What does The Times mean by this?" In that form and with that introduction it appeared next morning as the editor's leading article.—London Crypt.

Through and Through.

He was awfully bored. The day was a bright and sunshiny one, and all outdoor had taken on its gayest aspect, but he did not even rise from the ground, which, in spite of the warmth, was still damp from the early dews. He lay on his back on the wet grass, and gazed straight up into the sky without moving.

Every now and then he gave vent to a deep sigh, but beyond that, and an occasional hoarse noise from his throat, he showed no signs of existence. He felt so terribly bored.

Most people would have thought that he had plenty to live for, as he was rich in worldly goods, and with a young wife and child, there seemed every prospect of his being able to at least get along.

Indeed, he would have liked to do so very much, but he was so very bored. Some amateur sportsman in the woods had mistaken him for a bear, and had sent buckshot through his body.

He was waiting for a surgeon.

A Good Company.

The Burch Jubilee Theatrical Company
which has been playing in town during the past week, is certainly deserving of much better patronage than they have been receiving. People seem to be laboring under the impression that the company is not any good, but in this they are mistaken we are glad to say. We cannot make personal reference to each member of the troop, but suffice to say they are nearly all direct from New York. Two new specialists arrived on Wednesday, and with the addition of Mr. Booth, who is well known in town, the company will be greatly strengthened. The little dancer is good and is no novice on the stage.

meeting of the Liberals of Camden township will be held at Centerville on Tuesday, July 13th, at the hour of 2 p.m., for the purpose of appointing delegates to attend the Liberal Convention to be held at Sharbot Lake to select a Liberal Candidate to contest the riding of Addington at the next provincial elections. The Liberals are going into the fight with an enthusiasm that augurs success.

All the People

Should keep themselves healthy and special care should be given to this matter
at this time. Health depends upon pure, rich blood, for when the blood is impure
and impoverished diseases of various kinds are almost certain to result. The one true blood purifier is Hood's Sarsaparilla. By its power to purify and vitalize blood, and the record of remarkable cures effected proves that it has wonderful power over disease. It actually and permanently cures when all other preparations fail to do any good whatever.

Nuptials.

The following is from the Colborne Enterprise. The bride is well and favorably known in this section: A very quiet home wedding was that of Mr. Allen Kidd,
of Warsaw and Miss Mattie Robeson,
daughter of Rev. J. E. Robeson, Colborne, which took place on Thursday last at two o'clock, at the residence of the bride's parents. Only the immediate relatives of the parties and a few intimate friends of the bride were present. The ceremony was performed by the father of the bride assisted by Rev. T. W. Joliffe. Mr. and Mrs. Kidd left on the evening train for Belleville and other places.

Tampering with a Mill-Dam.

A very interesting case was tried before
Mr. J. D. Walker, J. P., at the Court House, Monday morning. Two men, Richard and Wilson Walker, of the township of Hinchinbrook, were charged with destroying a mill dam at Fifty Depot Lake,
in the township of Hinchinbrook. Mr. B.
S. O'Loughlin and W. J. Benjamin, representing the Napanee River Improvement Co., came in from Yarker this morning to look after their company's interests in prosecuting the defendants. The members of the company claim that the dams are frequently tampered with. Sometimes fisherman open the sluice to allow the fish to pass through; at other times
people open the dam to keep the water from flooding their lands. Only the other day one of the dams in the back country was blown up by dynamite. To tamper with the sluices is a serious offence and, if the parties are convicted, means a long term of imprisonment in the Provincial Penitentiary. The case was dismissed for lack of evidence, but the company are determined to put a stop to tampering with their property.—Kingston News.

The Town Censor.

Our esteemed contemporary the Star devoted about one column and a half of its valuable space to THE EXPRESS last week.
Our neighbor, apparently, was not pleased with our mild protest against its highly colored picture of the town, and proceeds to pour the vials of its wrath upon our devoted head. Perhaps the abuse heaped upon us by this self-appointed censor was deserved for our temerity in venturing to deprecate assertion that Napanee is a place where lewd women hold high carnival and "by day and night delight to flaunt their vice in the faces of the public."
Of course the Star very generously affords us a loophole of escape by hinting that perhaps our article was not seriously intended.
In fact that journal can't conceive it possible that anyone should differ with it on the subject, although more than half our citizens resent the undeserved odium cast upon the fair fame of our fair town by the Star's exaggerated, far fetched and highly sensational article. Unlike the Star we do not look upon Napanee as a dangerous place in which to bring up a family. The moral tone of the town is above the average and as regards churches and educational institutions Napanee is very highly privileged. It is not our intention to notice the Star's coarse attack upon ourselves or in fact to pursue the subject any further. If imputing sinister motives and abusing a confrere is a sample of its idea of journalistic common sense and etiquette
we are glad that we fall short.

Edward Reindeer a Mexican negro was arrested in Deseronto Wednesday morning on a charge of burglary. He was confined in Deseronto jail just long enough to be able to see his way out and when he did he lost no time in leaving the premises. He ran like a reindeer and soon lost his pursuers. He went west and Chief Newton, Belleville, was told to be on the lookout for him. In the evening he was seen at Marysville but darkness of course lent him a helping hand and he hasn't been seen since.

A Belleville exchange says: The members of the wild west organization were the most orderly lot of circus men that ever visited the city. The boss canvas men of a circus are supposed to talk faster than an ordinary auctioneer and swear in proportion. No such men were here. The tents were put up and taken down with military precision and with the greatest order.

A Valuable Discovery.

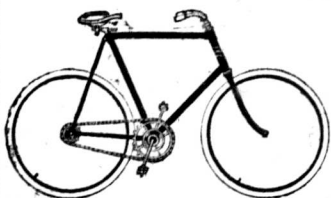

Several weeks ago there was cabled from London the news of the wonderful discoveries made in January last on the borders of the Libyan Desert, of the oldest papyri known bearing the words of Christ. The value of this find in the interest it will arouse the whole Christian world proves inestimable. It comprises a dozen leaves, each 5 1/2 by 3 1/2 inches in size, remarkably well preserved, and clearly written in uncial characters of the ancient Greek. It dates about sixty years after the crucifixion. It has easily been translated, and is found to consist of detached sayings of Christ, without context, each beginning with words, "Jesus saith." The translation will soon be published by the Egypt Exploration Fund. An immense edition at a few pence per copy will be provided, as to reach everybody. Prof. Petrie's winter explorations in Egypt have also been wonderfully fruitful. The bulk of his collections is in two groups, separated by a gap of more than thirty centuries. The papyri comprise 4,000 documents. The contents of this library probably range from the first to the sixth century. The discoverer expects that ten to twenty years will be occupied before the papyri are fully deciphered.

The Outcome of a Quarrel.

On Sunday last Reuben Jackson, proprietor of the Jackson House, Verona, accompanied by Matthew Revell, of that place went for a drive. Jackson has been ailing for many years, and has been growing weaker all the time. Besides consumption his heart is also affected. Previous to the drive on Sunday he had been drinking pretty freely, his continued illness making him despondent.

He wanted to go to Enterprise and Yarker on Sunday, and this was the reason he asked and persuaded Revell to accompany him. Jackson is of a very irritable nature, especially when in drink. The story goes that Jackson wanted to get Revell drunk. After both had imbibed pretty freely Jackson became quarrelsome and Revell warned him to let him alone. The upshot of it was that the rig was upset and the men thrown into the road. Jackson made a rush at Revell, striking him a couple of times. Revell retaliated, and it is quite evident that it did not require much to knock Jackson out. It is altogether likely that when he fell he struck his head and also hurt his back. As soon as Revell had struck the unfortunate man he saw that he had made a mistake and immediately got him into the rig and drove for Verona. The row occurred about a mile outside of Verona. Revell stopped at S. Asseltine's hotel on his way in and Asseltine immediately advised him to take Jackson to the doctor's, as all their efforts to revive him were of no avail. His condition is still very serious, and Dr. Moles has very little hope for his recovery. It is not thought that Jackson received very severe treatment at the hands of Revell. The latter was, of course, excited, or probably he would never have struck Jackson, although he provoked him. It is not felt that Jackson's present condition is caused by the fracas, as there is little doubt that he would have been laid up after the drunk. The authorities have done nothing to Revell as yet.

was scheduled for Saturday, and Deseronto was asked if it was intended to come down on Friday or Saturday. The reply was very brief. "Neither" was all the telegram contained. It is presumed the members are huffed over the decision of the referee in the last Napanee-Deseronto match. It might be added that the referee on that occasion knows the rules of association football perhaps better than any other player in Canada, and he has been playing the game all his lifetime. So long as everything went swimmingly in favor of Deseronto the members of that team were broad smiles, but when by skillful playing another team proved itself just a little better, the players from the Mohawk reservation became indignant. They proved themselves void of sporting principles in insisting upon claiming a goal kicked from a glaring off-side. The Kingston team had the best grounds in the world for a protest in its meeting with the Deseronto team, but for the sake of harmony and peace allowed the matter to go, thus giving Deseronto two points not earned nor deserved. In return for all this the pettish Deserontoites get on their high horse and, like the child in the song say, "I don't want to play in your yard." The Kingston team has submitted an offer to go to Deseronto once more to finish the schedule. As matters now stand the Kingston club wins the cup with twelve points. Sydenham is next with eleven.

OBITUARY.

MRS. S. B. MILLER.

On Saturday morning a feeling of sadness was cast over the community when the sad intelligence of the death of Mrs. S. B. Miller was made known. For the past two years Mrs. Miller has suffered from an illness, which baffled medical skill. She was not constantly afflicted, for at times was apparently in the best of health. Last winter she was taken with an attack and never fully recovered although for a few weeks she was up and around. About a month ago deceased was taken with a third attack and kept gradually sinking, until Saturday morning when she was called home to meet those who had gone before. Mrs. Miller was in her forty-seventh year and was always a resident of Napanee. Her maiden name was Alice J. Dryden, the only daughter of the late Wm. Dryden, who at one time was a partner in the grocery business in this town with Mr. Miller. Mrs. Miller was a consistent Christian and a member of the Eastern Methodist church. Her life was an exemplary one and her illness was borne with Christian patience and courage. Besides a loving and devoted husband, there are two sons and two daughters left to mourn the loss they have sustained. We feel that any words of ours would be of little consolation to the sorrowing family at this time, but we join with others in expressions of sympathy at the sad bereavement which has fallen upon them. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, to the Eastern cemetery and was largely attended. The A. O. U. W. of which Mr. Miller is Master Workman attended in a body.

CARRIE MCCOY.

On Sunday morning last after a lingering illness the spirit of Miss Carrie McCoy, a bright and promising girl who was loved by all with whom she was acquainted, passed away to join the countless throng on the other shore. Carrie was the only daughter of Mrs. Wm. McCoy and granddaughter of Mr. James Fellows with whom she lived. She was in her fourteenth year. Last winter she contracted a cold, which settled upon her lungs and developed into consumption. Notwithstanding the best of care and medical skill she kept gradually sinking and on Sunday last she was called to eternal rest. Deceased was a member of the Eastern Methodist Sabbath School, and was a believer in Christ, whom she steadfastly endeavored to serve. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon last to the Eastern Cemetery, and was largely attended by sorrowing friends. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the sorrowing mother and brother, in their sad bereavement.

NORMAN STORMS.

It is with feelings of deepest regret that we are called upon to record the death of Norman Storms Esq., which sad event occurred at Violet on Saturday last. We have not received any particulars regarding his illness. Deceased was universally and highly respected, and his decease is deeply regretted. Mr. Storms was a staunch Reformer and could always be relied upon when work was to be done. He was an energetic worker in the cause of Methodism. The funeral which took place on Monday was largely attended. The bereaved family and relatives have our sincere condolences. Mr. Jacob Hickey, of Camden to Sarah Lillian daughter of the late James Young, of Hungerford.

successful result of her recent examinations at the Toronto Conservatory of Music. She passed with honors on organ playing. This examination was on third year work. She has only been attending the institution for about eight months, and the result is a most satisfactory showing as she stood next to the lady who took the diploma and gold medal.

Reform Convention.

On Thursday last a meeting of the Reform Association was held in the town hall for the purpose of selecting a candidate for the riding of Lennox at the coming elections to the Ontario Legislature. Mr. Symington, president, was in the chair. Bowen E. Aylsworth, warden of the county was unanimously selected. Speeches were delivered by D. W. Allison and G. W. Dawson. A full report of the meeting will appear in our next issue.

A Fatal Accident.

A shocking accident occurred on Wednesday in the Grand Trunk yards, Belleville in which William Hose, of Deseronto, was cut in two by a train. It appears that the unfortunate young man, with two companions, boarded a freight train going east, and as the conductor ordered them off, Hose jumped off in front of the afternoon express for the west, which then came along. The express engine struck him and knocked him under the freight, which passed over him, completely severing his body. The trains were stopped and willing hands speedily went to the injured man's aid, but he appeared to have been instantly killed.

Killed at Watertown.

Edward McPherson, a steam engineer employed at the Remington Paper Co's mill B on Sewell's Island, Watertown, was caught in a large driving belt shortly before 9 o'clock Saturday morning and received injuries from which he died about an hour later. At first it was supposed that he had been killed as the result of an accident while at work, but later development reveal even more unfortunate circumstance and places the responsibility for his death at least partly on John McMillan, a fellow workman, who exchanged blows with McPherson, as a result of which the latter fell upon the machinery and was killed. Our informant states that the deceased formerly lived at Camden East. He has been in the employ of the Remington Paper Company for the past ten years.

An Express Robbery.

The mysterious disappearance of a $250 sealskin saque from one of the wagons of the Canadian Express Co. is exercising the detective department of Toronto. While at the Buffalo Bill Wild West Show was at the Quebec one of the ladies of the troupe ordered a magnificent sealskin coat. It was arranged that the coat should be made in Quebec and forwarded to the Toronto branch of the firm, tried on there, and paid for. On Saturday the coat reached Toronto by the Canadian Express Co. and was sent out in one of the regular delivery wagons. The driver last saw the parcel at the Pure Gold Works on Front street, where he delivered a package. From there to Renfrew's store on King street is not five minutes' distance, but when he looked for the parcel at Renfrew's it was not in his wagon. It must have been removed from the wagon either while he was in the Pure Gold Company's building or on the street between there and Renfrew's.

The electric light is being put into the park for Thursday's Grand Fete.

A very sociable and enjoyable evening was spent at the residence of R. Vance, 7 Hamilton street, Watertown, on Monday evening of last week, it being the birthday of his daughter Hattie. About 60 of her friends and relatives were present and enjoyed themselves dancing and playing podro and other games. Ice cream and cake were served. Excellent music was rendered during the evening, and the lawn was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The party disbursed about midnight.

change in the Ontario License Act, and in the item made reference to the Odessa hotelkeepers. Mr. Robt. Bennett, of Odessa, sends the following:

Odessa, Ont., July 4th, 1897.
Editor Napanee Express.
DEAR SIR—I see in your last week's issue an item referring to Odessa hotelkeepers finding fault with Napanee hotelkeepers, wanting them to comply with the law, as Odessa hotelkeepers have. I Robt. Bennett, hotelkeeper, of the village of Odessa, never intimated anything of the kind and I wish my Napanee friends to know so. The people of Napanee want what the Odessa people want, that is their business, not mine, or the people living in this vicinity. I wish to have this published as you said hotelkeepers (that means two) and I am not in it. Yours truly,
ROBT. BENNETT,

Mrs. A. Carleton Todd announced a performance in the opera house on Tuesday evening of last week. It was her intention to repeat the Jubilee Entertainment as given on June 21st, but when it came to the time to raise the curtain there were twelve people in the hall, and the manager decided not to proceed, so the money was refunded.

J. S. Hulett is making an entirely new style of picture, known as the porcelain finish. This finish is the nearest approach to real life ever attained by photography and has to be seen to be appreciated. Mr. Hulett in order to introduce this new style of work will have a representative call upon the ladies of Napanee and vicinity next week, with a full line of samples showing the scope of this new style of work.

Sir Wilfred Laurier, the dominion premier, addressing a meeting of members of the house of commons, known as the colonial party, urged the direct representation of the colonies in the imperial parliament, which ought to be, he contended, a grand national council or imperial federal parliament. In the course of his address he said that if Australia and South Africa were confederated like Canada, it would greatly simplify the question.

Roderick Parrott, an old and highly respected resident of Belleville, passed away on Wednesday at the residence of Mr. W. Wool, Grier street, at the advance age of 69 years. The deceased gentlemen was born in Ernestown and had been a resident of that city 40 years. He was a member of the city council a number of years. He was married but his wife preceded him to the grave a number of years ago. No children were born to them. The remains were brought to Napanee Friday for interment.
